Dreams'94

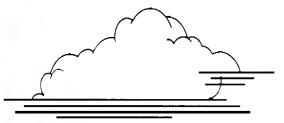

es, we had our share of nightmares this year. Most based on weather. We suffered through unbearable September heat, steady rain throughout most of Homecoming weekend, winter's severe cold and frequent ice storms and the late arrival of spring. But the positives always outweighed the negatives. Our dreams of the future, those little things that mean so much to each of us, continued to inspire us, even on the darkest days. And reaching for that dream called graduation was what all of us were ultimately working for.

he weather made this year

a nightmare beyond

anyone's imagination.

While Mother Nature teased us

While Mother Nature teased us with a few nice days here and there, most were the worst on record. Bad weather caused the days to seem like weeks and the weeks to feel like months. Ice, wind, snow and cold temperatures caused problems this campus rarely has seen, including a drastic loss of electricity, incredible flooding, ice-over-ice on the roads and the worst nightmare of all—cancelled classes. Yea, right!

Campus adopts new anti-tobacco use policy; many students object

Many students that were used to the coffee and cigarette routine in Benedum Commons were in for a shock this year.

A new anti-tobacco policy was enforced, prohibiting the use of tobacco products in all buildings, including Benedum Commons.

John Cunningham, vice president for student affairs and dean of students, said this new policy came about to heed the advice of the Surgeon General and new information about smoking and the effects of second-hand smoke.

Although students realized the effects of smoking and second-hand smoke, they were not pleased that all of their rights were taken away.

"I don't see any reason that smokers should have their rights withheld in Benedum Commons," sophomore Liz Jewell said, "and no reason that half "Welcome to Bison Country!" our friendly mascot, Boomer, (sophomore Jeremy Staten) greets young fans. (by Michele Gockstetter)

Boorstin speaks at fall convo

Daniel J. Boorstin, librarian of Congress emeritus was the featured fall convocation speaker. His speech "Our Unpredictable Creators," discussed the differences between the world's discoverers and creators.

Keely Oelschlager received the Richard B. Kenner Freshman Leadership Award which is presented to the student who has demonstrated outstanding scholarship, leadership and character during their freshman year at Bethany.

The Anna Ruth Bourne Award was given to Kapp Delta who earned a G.P.A. of 3.3, and was th women's social group with the highest scholarshiduring the spring 1993 semester.

of the caf shouldn't be for smokers."

There also were some students who were in disagreement with the policy and planned to draw up a petition supporting smokers in Benedum Commons to help them gain some of their rights.

"I can understand that non-smokers should have the right not to breathe the smoke," senior Lynne Franklin said. "They have the right to make that choice and we have the right to smoke or not to smoke." (by Michele Capots)

Theatre presents 'Zoo Story'

The Department of Theatre presented, "The Zoo Story" by Edward Albee.

Tim Thompson, visiting assistant professor of Fine Arts, and Tom Stobart, a Wheeling playwright, presented the one-act play that kicked-off the season.

The season's theme, "sometimes a person has to go a very long distance out of his way to come back a short distance correctly," was taken from a line in "The Zoo Story." (by Carrie Scanlon)

Workers vote down union

In the Sept. 10 vote overseen by the National Labor Relations Board, Physical Plant workers voted 21-17 that they no longer wanted the United Mine Workers of America as their bargaining agents.

"I feel very good about the results," President D. Duane Cummins said. "We are putting all animosity behind us to work together to build the right relationship between the Physical Plant workers and the administration."

Local 8291 President Charlie Read agreed that workers and administration needed to work together.

"These are all adults here and they voted the way they wanted to vote," Read said. "Hopefully, we'll get together and talk and make some decisions. I'm not saying that things are going to come out great right away, but approaching this with sincere and open minds is the whole ball of wax."

Cummins said that after a short legal delay he would negotiate directly with the Physical Plant workers since there would no longer be a collective bargaining representative.

Another vote is possible in a year, but the union restricted in its petitioning activities for 10 months.

The college's Physical Plant employees formed the union Aug. 2, 1991, after hearing rumors that the college might subcontract outside help to replace cleaning workers. (by Rachel Wagner and Dan Veraki.)

Bethany College still in the dark

Even after the addition of some outdoor lights in he spring of 1993, there still seemed to be concerns bout adequate lighting on campus. Last spring ights were added at the top of Cardiac Hill and round the Goodnight House.

Sven de Jong, Student Board of Governors president, said he thought the campus could still use nore lighting in some places.

Other students also agreed that there still needed o be more lighting. Many students didn't feel safe valking at night by themselves. Sophomore Sherri Jaker did not think campus lighting was sufficient.

"Cardiac Hill is really scary," said Baker, a Heriage House resident. "I usually get someone from he football team to walk me home at night, if I have walk."

Senior John Blaho said there were dark areas in ront of the cafeteria by the parking lot and the lot ehind Morlan Hall.

"They should pay more attention to the lights that re burned out," he said, "It seems like forever until hey get them replaced." (by Stephanie Cooke)

Welcome to "Our House"

The lower level of Morlan Hall was revamped into an alternative housing unit. Students residing in this area had to follow the freshman alcohol policy and certain rules of their own, such as quiet hours.

The idea was proposed by students who were looking for a different type of housing than previously offered at Bethany. (by Michele Capots)

Alcohol policy enforced

NCAA and Bethany College alcohol policies were enforced at sporting events. The college's student handbook stated that 'the consumption of alcoholic beverages is prohibited in any public areas of the campus—including athletic facilities and outside grounds.' The NCAA alcohol policy stated that no alcohol was allowed in sporting arenas.

Athletic Director Wally Neel said athletics was trying to bring to the attention of spectators that there was a policy. The athletic department also was trying to make sure spectators knew where they were allowed to tailgate.

Campbell Hall flooded

The women of Campbell Hall found many areas of their residence hall flooded as water made its way into the building as roofers worked on repairing the roof.

The old roof was so bad that it had collected water and as the roofers tore up the old roof, the water fell into rooms on the third floor, said senior Kathleen Costlow, president of Campbell.

When it rained, rooms and halls were again flooded. The water backed up in some pipes and went through the inside of the walls on all three floors. It also went past electrical circuits on the second floor.

Even though the roof had been built about eight years ago, it was evident that it needed repairs. Joe Kurey, vice president of finance and treasurer, said a roof should last 20 years.

"Water was gushing down the wall across the hall and into my room," Garden said.

Junior Sharon Finney was one of the many residents worried about water running into a second floor electrical box.

Although Campbell residents were warned that the roof would be under repair, they had no idea of the possibility of flooding. (by Rachel Wagner)

Women revolt in 'Lysistrada'

The second performance of the Bethany theatre season was "Lysistrada" by Aristophanes. The play opens during the Peloponnesian War when the fighting is at a standstill. Lysistrada decides to unite the women in an effort to end the war. She urges the women to deny sexual favors to all men in an effort to force the men to end the fighting and sign a treaty.

This comedy illustrated the relationship between the actual war and the war the women fought against the men.

Lysistrada was played by senior Emily Vulgamore, who is pictured with senior Holly Price and juniors Jonathan Vogel and Omar Benchoff. Tim Thompson, visiting assistant professor of Fine Arts, directed the play. Senior Leigh Ann Johnson assisted. (by Robin Laniewski)

Homecoming

Homecoming came and went, but the memories ve on. Memories that for some cannot be expressed in a thousand words. So, the Bethanian decided to express those memories for you—through pictures f Homecoming fun. The weekend festivities kicked iff by greeting alumni and students with comedian Gilbert Gottfried. Alpha Xi Delta senior Laura Haught was crowned Homecoming queen. She reigned over the weekend's festivities, and, along with students, alumni, faculty and staff, danced that way to the sounds of "1964: As the Beatles" at the ollege's annual Homecoming dance. Homecoming 93 came to an end as alumni said their good-byes, teir souls filled with fond memories of a good time. Until next year...

Cho brought humor to campus

Margaret Cho brought to Bethany a fresh, humorous outlook of her Korean heritage and her experiences growing up Asian in America.

Cho had appeared on such programs as "The Dennis Miller Show" and "An Evening at the Improv." She also had been a frequent face on MTV and VH-1.

But, Cho hasn't focused her talents strictly on comedy. Cho had performed on a Bob Hope special, an Eddie Murphy production called "Move the Crowd" and an episode of "The Golden Palace." (by John Bowers)

Parking regs, fines revised for students

The director of Safety and Security presented a proposal to the college dealing with changes in parking regulations and fines that would benefit the campus community.

The proposal, drafted by Michael Dixon, was presented to Joe Kurey, vice president for finance and treasurer; John Cunningham, vice president for student affairs and dean of students; and Greg Krikorian, assistant dean of students. It was approved because they believed the changes would benefit drivers, security and the college.

Because of the changes, parking ticket fines were reduced by 50 percent. Cunningham said that the purpose of tickets was not to make money, but to keep passages and fire lanes open for safety purposes.

Security continued to enforce the 15 mph speed limit throughout campus and used discretion in stopping speeders.

Another change was the addition of a traffic court. The court will give violators the opportunity to present their side of the story concerning their parking tickets. A representative from student court and a representative from the dean of students office will hear grievances.

Betas, Phi Mus take Greek Sing honors

Beta Theta Pi and Phi Mu finished first in the annual Greek Sing competition as part of Parents' Weekend activities.

The winning sorority, Phi Mu, performed a customized version of "Lean on Me" and a version of "Day by Day." The winning fraternity, Beta, performed "The Loving Cup" and a funny, fraternity-written composition where they made fun of themselves to the tune of Jimmy Buffett's "Margaritaville." (by Doug Mock)

Montgomery, Kopcha elected SBOG leaders

Juniors Jean Montgomery and Steve Kopcha, both accounting majors, were elected president and vice president of SBOG. The only ticket that ran for the positions, they both previously served as cabinet members on the present SBOG administration. Montgomery served as treasurer and Kopcha was the club and committee chairperson.

They hope that while in office they can continue the programs outgoing President Sven de Jong started, including getting more students involved in student life, academic resources, student health services and food services. Town council concerned about Beta house plans

The community neighboring the proposed Beta Theta Pi house on the corner of Richardson and Church streets voiced concerns against the building at the November town council. Issues discussed included sanitation, traffic, public disorder and lack of communication with Beta's future neighbors.

Mark MacWilliams, assistant professor of religious studies and representative of the neighboring community, presented the council with a petition signed by all of the adjacent property owners, except one, which called for postponement of the building permit until the community's concerns were addressed.

"We are concerned about traffic congestion and the safety of our children from speeding vehicles," MacWilliams said. "We are also concerned about public drunkenness and trash collecting everywhere."

MacWilliams said he was contacted by John U. Davis, Beta adviser, and told that the plans for the building would not be shared with the neighboring community until the building permit was approved.

"The Betas I know are real good kids," MacWilliams said. "I'm not against them having a house. But the fraternity refuses to listen to the concerns of their future neighbors. They're communicating to us that they don't care what we think."

In response, Davis said he was unaware of the petition and wished the community would have come to the Beta organization instead of acting without their knowledge. He also said that he was unaware of the details of the building so it is impossible for him to share information he does not possess.

"This is about the kids," Davis said. "They're here to grow and it's our job to help them.' (by Doug Mock)

Who's who at Bethany

Thirty Bethany students were recognized as outstanding national leaders in the 1993 edition of Who's Who Among Students In American Universities and Colleges.

Those named were juniors Micah Chamberlain, Chris Colcombe, Sven de Jong, Jenn Dragisich, Craig Hogan, Jenn Johnson, Stef Magnino, Melodie O'Hanlon and Dan Takah.

Also, seniors Sarah Chenoweth, Karrie Colvin, Kevin Cox, Nicolle Ferris, Scott King, Todd Lesser, Kari Majewski, Nicole Mazur, Julie Payne, Barry Shields, Marnette Shields, Allegra Smith, Jenn Stokes, David Stoner, Kim Swaney, Reid Vance, Doug Van Gilder, Dan Verakis, Kelly Wall, Jessica Welsh and Carrie Wolukis.

Questions raised in 'Baby Dance'

"The Baby Dance," a dramatic play by Jane Anderson, was directed by Tim Thompson, visiting assistant professor of Fine Arts. Students who participated in the performance were seniors Leigh Ann Johnson as Rachel and Michael Hynes as Al, junior Todd Prather as Ron, sophomore Jason Ruta as Richard and freshman Jody Handley as Wanda.

This play centered around Wanda and Al, residents of a trailer park in Louisiana, who were expecting their fifth child. The couple was not financially sound and decided to sell the unborn child to another couple. This wealthy California couple agreed to pay for all of the woman's prenatal care and hospital expenses. A debate arose when it was revealed that the child might be born with a physical defect. The rest of the play created a dramatic situation in which both couples struggled to decide what to do with the newborn. (by Robin Laniewski)

de Jong thanks student body

Student Board of Governors President Sven de Jong thanked all who supported his administration during his term as he prepared to turn over the presidency to junior Jean Mongomery.

de Jong, along with Vice President Chris Colcombe, appreciated the support he was given by students, faculty and staff. He asked that Mont gomery and Steve Kopcha, the new vice president, be given the same support.

deJong believes he and Colcombe addressed all of the issues that concerned them.

"Each of the issues has been addressed," de Jong said. "They may nonecessarily have come to fruition, though. But I'm confident that Steve and Jean will be able to follow through with these issues, as well as address those of their own."

de Jong hopes he and his cabinet were successful.

Blizzard '94 sets records

What could possibly be worse than Blizzard '93? ow about Blizzard '94? As schools, roads and airorts closed, garbage pick-up, buses and newspaper eliveries were delayed or halted all together. The alley experienced record-setting cold temperatures and snow accumulation over a three-week period.

Just how cold was it? Cold enough for Bethany ollege to suspend classes and close offices, something we know doesn't happen often. In the area, temperatres fell below the zero mark seven times since the ew year, with Jan. 19 bringing the coldest weather wer for that date with a 22 below zero temperature.

The first major storm dumped 18 inches of snow in an 11-hour period. Another four inches fell between storms and the second major storm contributed 10 more inches—a total of 32 inches of snow in some areas.

Across the nation, the blizzards claimed 69 lives. Winds blew up to 90 m.p.h. and drifts were measured at 30 feet in some rural areas. "Digging out" actually took weeks.

Campus in dark after power outage

An underground voltage short circuit caused a power outage that effected most buildings on campus and lasted for days. Although a number of buildings were effected, Kevin Byrne, director of the Physical Plant, said workers fixed the dorms first because where students live was top priority.

Byrne explained the problem as being two power lines, with three wires each, as melting together causing the short circuit. (by Brenda Stanek)

Bid Week comes and goes again

Bid Week was once again a flurry of activities as the Greek organizations looked to welcome new members into their groups. More than 100 students went through the week's craziness, all looking forward to that night of nights—Bid Night.

When it was all said and done, some students got their wish and others did not Despite the poor weather conditions, mos of the women did not have a problem run ning up the hill. Neither did the men charging up behind them.

The sororities gave bids to 45 women while the fraternities welcomed 64 new male pledges. Alpha Xi Delta welcomed 10 pledges, Kappa Delta, 3; Phi Mu, 16; and Zeta Tau Alpha, 16. Alpha Sigma Phi welcomed 20 pledges, Beta Theta Pi, 10; Delta Tau Delta, 4; Kappa Alpha Order, 6; Ph Kappa Tau, 11; and Sigma Nu, 13.

With Bid Night came a weekend filled with activities arranged by each of the Greel organizations for their pledges.

Phi Kappa Tau took their pledges to Breezy Heights Tavern for their traditional dinner. Kappa Alpha Order and Sigma Nowatched movies and hung out with their pledges, as did Alpha Sigma Phi. Delta Tau Delta educated their pledges on rules of the fraternity and Beta Theta Pi took their pledges into Pittsburgh Saturday night to play paint ball.

Alpha Xi Delta played various board games with their new pledges while Kappa Delta arranged a mystery game for their newcomers. The Phi Mus watched movies and Zeta Tau Alpha set up a room where members and pledges could dance, with a cafe where everyone could talk and eat.

Freshman Tara Pealer, who pledged Al pha Xi, enjoyed the weekend. "I was the first one to start up the hill." Pealer said. " was tired, but I didn't care." (by Jennife Leahy)

Administration stops condom machine proposal

Believe risks of the program would be greater than he gain.

SBOG's proposed condom machine program was topped by the administration because they believed the cost and liability risks involved were too ligh. The college could be considered liable for any ampering that might make a condom ineffective, an official said. They also could be held responsible for my vandalism to the machines.

SBOG Vice President Steve Kopcha said the aim of the program was to better meet the needs of the tudents by promoting safer sex through easier access to condoms.

John Cunningham, vice president for student afairs and dean of students, advised SBOG against he program. He said that because of the possible egal liabilities, the risks of the program would be greater than the gain.

Along with the liability concerns, Cunningham aid the machines would indirectly promote sex and some parents might not approve of the idea of taving machines in every campus housing unit. (by Mia DeStefano)

Cabaret is 'an hour and a half of laughs'

Bethany chapter of Alpha Psi Omega, the Fine Arts honorary, presented its annual Cabaret spoofing satirizing every aspect of Bethany life. Although they were hard on themselves, the cast was especially prof the audience's response to two skits, "King John and the Court of Logan" and the Phallusist and the Feminan exchange between two Bethany English teachers.

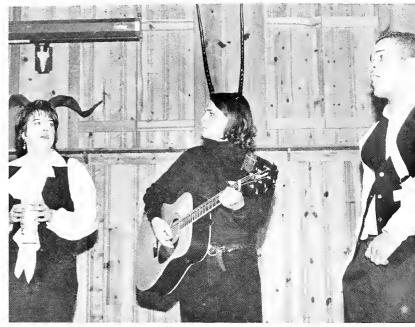

The crew said they were equal opportunity offenders, and they wanted people to enjoy the show.

"This is a fun show," said Gary Kappel, adviser to the honorary. "There's not a whole lot of pressure—it's like a main (theatre) production."

Along with Kappel, seniors Leigh Johnson, Emily Vulgamore, Jen Heider, Steve Kyhos, Steve Barbour, Bryan Moss and Karrie Colvin, juniors Mia DeStefano, Jon Vogel, Todd Prather, Jessie O'Neill and Dave Chambers; and freshman Eric Armstrong provided the laughs.

As the lights went down and people left Maxwell's, just about everyone had a smile on their face. Kappel hoped the audience had "an hour and a half of laughs." It looks like his wish came true. (by Frank Benach)

Enrollment drops five percent

Spring enrollment was 686 students, down five percent from fall semester's enrollment of 722.

John C. Giesmann, registrar, said when President D. Duane Cummins addressed the faculty he estimated a seven percent attrition rate for spring semester. Giesmann was not overly concerned with the drop from fall to spring semester.

"There have been years where (the decrease) has peen at seven percent," Giesmann said.

Gary Forney, vice president for enrollment management, said he was looking forward to the 1994 fall semester because a key reason for last fall's low enrollment figure was because the freshman class was relatively small. (by Rachael Sims)

Committee sponsors contest

In honor of Black History Month, the college sponsored a contest that encouraged students to learn more about African-Americans and their contributions to the United States.

Students were asked to create a "dream team" of 10-12 African-Americans who they felt deserved recognition for their accomplishments.

"The purpose of the contest is to get students to find out more about African-Americans who have contributed to the history of the country, and to encourage them to find out about those who have made contributions not only in their own disciplines, but across the curriculum," said Jo-Ellen Asbury, chair of the committee. Keim stresses responsibility

A noted speaker on college-aged students and their lifestyles id students need to understand the importance of responsibiland getting involved in the community.

Will Keim spoke to a crowd of about 250 students on topics onging from boredom to Greek life to sex and alcohol abuse. Keim said there are seven things to do to make yourself a ccessful person—study, serve, make friends with everyone, op hazing, be sexually responsible, drink responsibly and op doing drugs.

"It's OK not to have sex," Keim said. "There are three ways be sexually responsible—use a condom, use a condom, use a ndom." Keim said one of every 250 college students are rrying the HIV virus.

Keim stressed the importance of getting involved in the mmunity. He said that people do enough suffering without it help. Instead of putting someone down or hazing them, we led to take the burden off of people's backs and try to lift them instead. (by Todd Biela)

Theatre presents 'The Three Sisters'

Bethany's theatre department performed Dav Mamet's adaptation of "The Three Sisters." The pla which starred seniors Emily Vulgamore, Jennif Heider and Jennifer Larese, was written by Anto Chekhov in 1901. It is about three sisters who long return to Moscow and live thappy life they once lived whethey were younger and their parents were still alive.

At the time the play was wr ten, Chekhov was very ill and w living in rural Russia. Like the cha acters in his play, he also longed be in Moscow, where the girl loved was a professional actress

"The mood of the play is vermelancholy because everyone into show is fighting or wanting son thing that they never get," Vergamore said. "They think that they go back everything will be finagain."

Director Tim Thompson said of play is about people wasting the talents and energy on trivial meters, as well as the disparity tween language and action. He sawhat you say is not always with you do and the main theme of play is estrangement. (by Kelli Policy 1998)

Honor code in the works

The leadership council was working on constructing a college Honor Code to be included with the Judi-Code found in the student handbook. The code will be a set of statements that serve as guidelines for Ident conduct, but focuses on academic honesty and following the lines of the student judicial code, said We Stoner, Student Board of Governors student concerns representative.

Stoner said the code would try to help improve student life and that the idea has been brought about because of disciplinary problems that have been arising at the college. "It will give better recourse, guidelines for students," he said.

Jean Montgomery, president of SBOG, said she thinks the code is a good idea but doesn't know how well it would work. She said it depends on how well it is written and enforced.

John S. Cunningham, vice president for student services and dean of students, said the idea of an Honor Code would be similar to the Bethany College Compact found in the student handbook. This compact discusses honesty, lifestyle and expectations of the college community. (by Brenda Stanek)

Jeanne Hoff, assistant professor of accounting, was named this year's Richard B. Kenney Award winner. SBOG President Jean Montgomery made the announcement on behalf of the student body.

In her first year at Bethany, Hoff said she was overwhelmed. "Even when I got the nomination, I still couldn't believe it." she said. "This has been a really good year for me."

The award is given yearly to the professor who is recognized by the student body for excellence in teaching and involvement with campus activities.

Others nominated were Chris Sampson, director of Academic Services; Kenn Morgan, assistant professor of Fine Arts; Frank Gorman, associate professor of religious studies; Russ Clothier, assistant professor of physics; Mary Ellen Komorowski, associate professor of math; and Robert Myers, professor of philosophy. Students learn Suzuki method of acting

Many students learned an alternative to traditional theater training methods through a demonstration workshop on the Suzuki Method of Actor's Training.

The method of acting was created in the 1960s by international director and producer Tadashi Suzuki. Suzuki believes most actors are unable to handle the difficult roles of characters found in classical stage productions. His method enforces a rigorous physical training regimen, using focal points and learning to control the body. If used, actors gain the will to take on any character and to maintain body strength for difficult and challenging roles.

Kelly Maurer, an actress and instructor in the Suzuki method, gave a hands-on workshop and spent a week working with students in visiting professor Tim Thompson's Fine Arts courses. (by Robin Laniewski)

Taking that creek cruise

Imagine the perfect Sunday afternoon. Does a leisurely ride down a winding creek, sitting in the sun come to mind?

Ten Bethany students enjoyed doing this as part of the regatta. All made their own crafts. The race started at Sugar Run Lodge and went two miles down Buffalo Creek.

"Everyone seemed to have fun," said freshman Kristen Thompson, president of the Outdoors Club, sponsor of the event.

Prizes through third place were awarded and also a most creative award was given. Earning first place were sophomores Jonathan Rumburg and Jay Swartzwelder. Their float consisted of three tubes covered by a piece of plywood and included a roof.

They had a few problems traveling down the creek. "We had to position ourselves on this boat so that we could paddle down the river," Rumburg said. "The boat was bigger than we thought and it caused problems."

Junior Jason Powers and freshman Richard Burnett teamed up in an unusual way to capture second place. Their Styrofoam float cracked halfway through the race. This was not a problem for these two.

"We just laid across the crack in order to keep the float together and then finished the race," Burnett said.

'Hippieness' was the theme of the float created by freshmen Jennifer Klages and Christine Welshans. Plywood decorated with peace signs and graffiti on an innertube was their third place creation.

Senior Bryan Moss, junior Matt Zilich and sophomore Gregg Komitsky were able to grab the judge's attention with their float of eight garbage cans, an inner-tube and a platform of wood. Their "saucer" won the creativity prize even though their raft broke halfway through the race. (by Robin Laniewski)

Manners were not a pre-requisite. Participants were guided through the basic elements of etiquette and fine dining. They tried their best to sit up straight, use the correct fork and not embarrass themselves.

"The atmosphere was so much different than the caf," junior Steve Kopcha said.

Not nervous was junior Adam Kradel who didn't believe the rules were that important.

May found seniors busy completing assignments and putting the finishing touches on those devilish practicums. The weather played havoc on us throughout the year, but Mother Nature was on our side as graduation weekend began with Friday's Baccalaureate service in Commencement Hall. Cynthia L. Clear blue skies and warm temperatures paved the way as 150 seniors received their degrees during the college's 152nd Commencement on the Old Main quadrangle. Four sides to the same story

As a student makes the journey from freshman to senior year, their attitudes toward life at Bethany change. Presented are four different interpretations of the 1993-94 school year.

Still under the spell

• the freshman year

Whether I'm in my room in Phillips, eating in the caf or walking across campus, it seems like there isn't a place in Bethany that isn't a memory of my first year in college.

As a high school senior, I used to dream about what college would be like. I longed for the freedoms and responsibilities, the opportunities and challenges, the stress and the satisfaction. I'm lucky to have found all of this at Bethany.

I enjoyed many new experiences. There's nothing like setting your own curfew and defining your own limitations, while the joy of doing your first load of laundry without it shrinking is indescribable.

Getting that first high mark on a tough assignment can give you an amazing boost of confidence. Celebrating can be even more fun. Making my first TOWER deadline and seeing my byline was very fulfilling. All these little joys can make a person want to forget about having to put up with other things like excessively cold or hot showers, heating problems and lack of cable television . . . maybe.

Bethany may be a small college, but it is filled with special people who care enough to appreciate others and the world around them, the little things that happen every day and especially the important new experiences in the life of a freshman. (by Christy Cooey)

The aura is gone

• the sophomore year

When I was a child I can remember my parents telling me how fast the time goes the older you get. That has never been more true than my sophomore year at Bethany.

It's amazing the difference a year makes. I remember coming in as an awestruck freshman, and it seems like yesterday. I was a timid, shy, boy-in-the-back-of-the-class. Now I'm the first person to voice my opinion on a topic.

The first few months can be summed up in one word—hot. Living on the the third floor of Morlan Hall let me appreciate the dampness of the basement, or "dungeon," that I once called my home.

I began to get the feeling of Bethany this year. I became accustomed to what it takes to be successful on campus. As a resident assistant I began to see one of my strengths; helping people. This led to many friendships that will last throughout the rest of my years at Bethany and beyond.

Then there are the classes, the one thing that everyone at Bethany has in common. Yeah, I heard the rumors. They scared me. "Freshman beware, your grades will drop your sophomore year," I was told. Why this was, I couldn't understand. "This couldn't happen to me," I thought. Wrong. My grade point average dropped. Not a big drop, but it did drop. This remains a mystery to me.

The aura of attending college is gone but you're still not really worried about graduation. You mess around and don't concentrate much. Bad philosophy, yes. Bu feels so good when it's 8 a.m. a you roll over and hit the snoozel then reset the alarm for 10 a. three mornings a week.

TOWER duty called for the fi time. I was scared but it turned of to be a lot of fun. My first put relations class was this semeste was scared. It turned out to be a of fun too.

My year can be summed up one word—change. Times a changing and so am I. I'm movin the right direction. Sophome year is said to be the toughest by made it through. (by Todd Biela)

I'd like to take a nap •the junior year

Time is flying right past me. I one over-powering factor in my i ior year was time, or rather he little of it I seemed to have.

As work gets harder and com in larger quantities, I struggle make everything fit into a day a into a week. You look at a calend once, and by the time you see again you've lost a week.

My case may be a tad bit extradinary though. My editor positi at The TOWER and my director position at WVBC zapped quitbit of my time and effort.

One finds when they reach to junior year that there is too much do and not enough time to do it could call my junior year a study sleep depravation. As the work longets larger, the amount of rest all ted gets smaller. I feel I haven't ha good night's sleep since 1987. The ability to just crash, to sleep with out an alarm going off, to crawling bed with no worries, is behind to man I was missing Toledo, Ohio, drinking Tang and reflecting with Barry Manilow. Now I am re-establishing in South Carolina and drinking more than Tang. And Barry? Some things never change.

I have lost the ability to goof-c

What will I miss? The fun, the eventful and the everyday. It may seem routine to walk to the caf, to fester in the lounge, to hear the click of computer keys, to study on the lawn of Old Main. But some of these things make life, well, Bethany.

And what about the bells in the tower, Saturday mornings in base-ball caps and sweats, chapter, the porch of the Campbell Mansion, late night conversations that come out of nowhere, the closing songs at Bubba's, Cardiac.

And the people. The laughs of Tony Mitch, Jerry Fuqua and John Taylor (especially when he laughs at himself), Tracy Maurer's sense of humor, Debbie Kessler's lectures on Frida Kahlo, Stanley Becker's intensity, Robert Myers' kindness, Jon Gordon's jokes, Lana Hartman Landon's "last day of class picture."

So what advice do I have? Cherish what makes Bethany unique. Be supportive. Say thanks, a lot. Don't criticize people for sticking to the rules, it's their job. Respect your elders, and Bethany tradition. Chuckle at the uniqueness of people you don't understand, and let them expand your perceptions instead of limit them.

Play. Study. Do both in moderation. Challenge. Question. Think. Accept nothing at face value. You are only one of the many that will pass through the Oglebay Gates, so savor every second while you can.

And have a glass of Tang. (by Julie Payne)

bok nostalgically at my freshman ar when I could take afternoon ps or spend time doing nothing. Looking ahead the prospect for st does not seem good. Soon I will be my senior year. This won't be a riod of rest. I will be doing a nior project, studying for comps. von't be napping.

Lounging around watching TV? rget about it. Staring blankly at e walls? A distant memory. Getig laundry done ahead of time? relearned to re-evaluate the meang of the word 'dirty.'

And what about the future? Will I ever feel like I once did or will I forever have more red than white in my eyes when I look in the mirror? The future looks bleak, but I'll do my best to blast into it with reckless abandon, promising myself that I will one day reach the "big sleep." (by James Walker) ethanians are busy from the time they arrive on campus in the fall until the time they leave for home in the spring. But senior year can be a mad rush to complete all of the requirements for graduation. Last minute practicums, senior projects, fulfilling perspectives and the dreaded comprehensive exams turn senior year into a nightmare for most students. Finally, after all the work is completed, students get the honor of graduating. Then they face the final nightmare . . . the REAL world!

And let us not forget the people who are responsible for changing our lives and instilling in us a thirst for knowledge. The faculty and staff of Bethany College are an ultra-important part of campus life. Bethany just would not be Bethany without them. They not only teach the courses and run the college, but also support students in many other ways.

In addition to teaching and grading, many choose to advise clubs and groups, attend events organized and run by students, and become friends with the many students they have contact with. The end of the year, with graduation looming, brings a sense of accomplishment.

Together they have brought Bethany students through another year. Hopefully, we won't forget them.

tudents dream of the day they will graduate. But they also dream of not having to deal with the nightmare of classes, homework and other responsibilities that come in all shapes and sizes to college students. Many daydream about the fun that takes place outside of the classroom, the library or the computer lab. Half of the fun of being a college student is participating in life outside the hallowed halls, having a good time with friends, enjoying "student" life.

In the great outdoors

Established in the spring of 1992, the Outdoors Club is one of the newer clubs on campus. Its founder, senior Allegra Smith, decided Bethany students needed some activity to help build their self-confidence. Exploring the outdoors, Smith believed, was a way to accomplish this goal.

And freshman Kristen Thompson, now president of the club, agrees. "The one thing I've learned the most is 'just do it.' When you're in a plane and the instructor tells you to put your feet out and jump when you're ready, you don't really have much choice," she said. "Sureit's scary, but it's built my self-confidence. If I can jump from an airplane and live to tell about it, daily life situations can't be that difficult."

By offering physical challenges, the club provides students with the chance to test and go beyond their limits with positive results. Freshman biology major Margaret Armstrong has discovered these benefits.

"The Outdoors Club is a great opportunity to find yourself in an adventurous setting," she said. "It provides the means for adventures, and it's a great way to meet other exciting people. I have been inspired by instructors who have encouraged me to go out and find my interests to further help me in the pursuit of my major. It's also a good way to get exercise."

Thompson and senior Eric Strommer coordinate all the activities. "It's basically our responsibility to arrange trips with the group through certain companies that handle these types of adventures," Thompson said. "We have to arrange for van availability and for food from Aladdin. We also need to keep track of who's going to which events and schedule and public meetings.

The most popular event is skydiving expeditions that to place each semester. Other actities include a mountain bike racamping and whitewater raftities.

"If you're looking for an advature and a way to challenge yo self, the Outdoors Club is the plato be," Smith said. (by Kara Schul

Live from Bethany —it's Wednesday Night

Wednesday Night Live certainly has evolved since it started. Previously called Bethany Christian Fellowship and Midweek, it became Wednesday Night Live in 1991 when Mindy Fetherman, assistant chaplain, and several Midweek students changed the name in order to provide a more upbeat atmosphere.

WNL provides for the spiritual needs of students. Members encourage students to live out their faith in all areas of their lives.

Freshman Lisa Hicks enjoys having the support of a Christian foundation. "Wednesday Night Live fulfills my need for a fellowship support group for people who share the same beliefs," she said.

During meetings, members sing, discuss Christian topics and interact in a spiritual setting.

Freshman Kristen Thompson, social coordinator for WNL, helps arrange activities that are inexpensive so all students can participate.

"It's important that everyone realize they are welcome," she said. "One of our goals is not to become exclusive and make sure all f welcome. It's not just fundament strictly religious discussions. It'si portant to do something creat and unique in the company of I low Christians."

Members enjoy activities incliing movie nights at Pendlet Heights and birthday celebratio

"One of the really fun things do is celebrate members' birthday Thompson said. "They get to p the restaurant, and we all go out dinner after the meeting. It's rea fun."

In addition to retreats and caning excursions, 22 members tended the Jubilee conference. Pittsburgh in February. They wable to meet with other colleges dents who were actively involvin Christian campus activities. Kara Schultz)

"By working on The TOWER, the ggest thing I gained was experice," said sophomore Ross erenda, fall semester advertising anager. "I applied what I learned, met deadlines and learned to work with others. Everyone does their own part, individuals work as a team to make the medium the best it can be."

The staff produced 25 issues this year, including a special April Fools Day issue filled with stories poking fun at the staff and the college.

"The editorial staff just cut loose and were as crazy as they wanted to be, "said junior James Walker, spring semester editor in chief. "It was a great opportunity to have a little fun with the administration and the people that make up Bethany."

The TOWER is delivered all over campus, hot off the press, on Friday mornings. Students rush to read the latest campus news.

"Seeing the paper on Friday gives the members of the staff self-satisfaction, to see all the work they put into it pay off," said junior Stephanie Cooke, fall semester editor in chief. "I gained a lot of writing experience and time management skills by working on The TOWER."

Communication majors participate as staff members to gain experience in the field. However, others are involved with the paper to fulfill personal enjoyment by supporting the campus media.

"I enjoy finding out the facts about what's happening on campus," said junior Steve Colon, a religious studies major and spring semester features editor. "Students need to realize that the paper belongs to all students, not just comm majors." (by Sarah Clark)

ISA brings cultural differences to Bethany

The International Student Ass ciation is an organization wherest dents join together to learn abo different cultures, traditions ar people. Foreign students attending Bethany bring their many differe home country experiences togeth in an effort to make other Bethang students more culturally aware what is going on in the world.

Hoping to get more America students involved, they sponsor thannual international dinner in O tober. This year, students from loc colleges representing countries around the world were part of the 400 people who turned out for a thentic Gambian cuisine. Also fe tured was a reggae band that adde a Caribbean sound. The bash wonot only entertaining and enjoyable it gave everyone a chance to expendence the sounds, sights and tastes other cultures.

ISA brings the world outside the United States to Bethany. The characteristic of international students also are members. Everyone has expendences to share about the culture which they were raised, even if it only sharing about Bethany to som one who has never lived here before.

By sharing about their differe countries, the members becon more knowledgeable about the world outside of Bethany. (by Emischoenfeldt) ethany College athletes were the nightmares of their opponents this year.

Men's soccer captured their 15th consecutive PAC title, while the women won their third. For the first time since 1981 football finished with a .500 record. Women's basketball had a record-setting season, finishing with the best record in school history. Softball dominated the PAC with a perfect 8-0 record, and baseball made a second place finish in the PAC. Bison athletes proved dreams of victory can come true.

Men's Soccer

he men's soccer team completed another successful year with a record of 15-4-1, and won their 15th consecutive PAC title. The team continued a 13-year winning tradition by having fewer than five losses. The Bison finished 25th in NCAA Division III ranking, but did not make the NCAA playoffs for the first time since 1983.

Finishing the season on a strong note was not a surprise for the quick, skillful team behind the strong leadership of co-captains Craig Hogan and Jake Williams.

Williams, a junior, earned the PAC Most Valuable Player Award and a spot on the All-PAC First Team. Williams tallied 15 goals in the 20-game season and dished out four assists for a conference high 34 points.

Joining Williams on the first team were junior Brad Foringer and sophomores David Gross, Frankie Taal, Shon Meale, Walter Gonzalez, Pat Ricci and Malleh Sallah.

Sallah allowed only 21 goals in the 17 games in which he guarded the net. He recorded 97 saves for a goal-against average of 1.16 per game.

Earning honors on the All-PAC Second Team were juniors Dave Farmer and Darryl Steward. Coach John Cunningham earned the honor of being named PAC Coach of the Year for the ninth consecutive year.

Named to the Division III All-South Region Second Team were Sallah, Gonzales and Williams.

Additionally, Gonzalez was named the team's most valuable player and Taal received the Lance Tacke Award, presented to the outstanding first-year player. (by Laura Hammett) he women's soccer program celebrated its third consecutive Presidents' Athletic Conference title but fell just short of reaching the .500 mark with a record of 8-9-1.

The team's strong group of returning letterwinners worked hard throughout the season to bring the talented freshmen into the game plan. The intense concentration on teamwork paid off for many individuals at the end of the season.

In addition to receiving the team's most valuable player award, sophomore Missy Miller was honored with the conference's Most Valuable Player Award. She was additionally named to the All-PAC First Team for a second year.

Juniors Chris Gastor, co-captain, and Holly Brown joined Miller on the All-Conference team. Earning positions on the second team were senior co-captain Tasha Moritz, junior Marci Jackley, sophomore Heather Gregory and freshman Karen Piekut.

Another outstanding honor went to Coach Jan Forsty, who was named the PAC Coach of the Year for a third consecutive year.

Additional team awards went to Piekut, who was named freshman of the year; sophomore Kelly Hindman, who was named most improved; senior Jennifer Newcaster received the scholar athlete award; and Moritz and Newcaster received the Coach's Award. (by Laura Hammett)

Cross Country

the cross country teams made a good showing. Both the men's and women's teams had talented freshmen, as well as strong returning runners. Coach John McGowan took over the head coaching position this year and quickly realized the only thing that could hold back the team fter getting off to a late start, would be experience.

The only home meet of the season came when the team was at its best—the Presidents' Athletic Conference Championship meet. The team finished third of four schools.

Though several runners stood out through the season, two were honored for their efforts at the PAC meet.

Freshman Shawn Brown placed 10th during the meet to earn a position on the All-Conference Second Team. Senior Amber Parsons, who was the team's leading runner, copped a sixth place finish and also a place on the All-PAC Second Team.

Parsons and freshman Joe Martin were voted the team's most valuable runners. The Coach's Award went to sophomores Emily Schoenfeldt and Curtis Wadsworth. (by Laura Hammett) he volleyball team used the 1993 season as a time for adjusting and rebuilding. The team used new recruits and veteran players to fill the gaps left empty by players who graduated. Their final record of 5-31 was disappointing and the Bison finished fourth with a record of 2-6 in the PAC.

The freshmen of the team saw a lot of playing time throughout the season, promising success for the Bison of the future. The rookies continued to learn more each match from strong veteran players, including the dynamic duo of senior cocaptains Heather Truitt and Jennifer Haggerty.

Another major obstacle that stood in the Bison's way was the number of injuries to members of the squad. With injuries to veteran players, many new players were forced to take over roles that they may not have been prepared for.

In honor of their hard work, sophomore Leigh Henderson earned a spot on the All-PAC First Team and Haggerty earned a spot on the All-PAC Second Team. Henderson had 228 kills in 95 games for an average of 2.4 per game. Freshman Liz Broughton and Truitt received honorable mention honors.

Truitt and Haggerty were named the team's most valuable players, while Truitt was named the best offensive player and Haggerty was named the best defensive player.

Junior Michelle McGlinchey was named the most improved player and Broughton was named the rookie of the year. (by Laura Hammett) ew coaches, positive attitudes and a change in philosophy made for a promising season for the Bison.

Coach Steve Campos had plenty of talent to work with, as the Bison returned 19 letterwinners, including seven 1992 All-PAC performers. A new era was set as the Bison posted a record of 4-4-1. It was the first time since 1981 that the Bison finished with a .500 record.

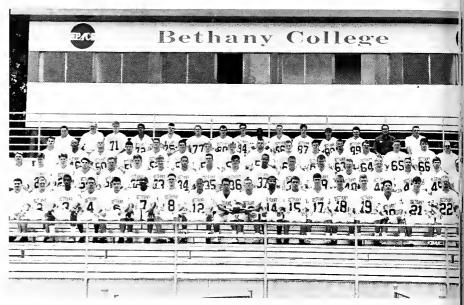

Bison fans saw a lot of passing from the team as they utilized the talents of their skilled wide receivers and tight ends. Junior quarterback Dan Takah took the starting job after two years of playing backup.

Takah was named the offensive player of the year in the PAC, leading the conference in total yardage with 2,171 yards. He ranked 13th in NCAA Division III in total offense. He also was named the team's offensive most valuable player.

Sophomore tight end Buddy Mc-Kinley tied a Bethany single season record with 68 receptions. He joined Takah on the PAC First Team, leading the conference in receptions, yards receiving and yards per game. McKinley averaged 7.5 receptions per game giving him a sixth place national ranking. He also received the team's Coach's Award.

Sophomore defensive back Shedrick Young was also selected to the PAC First Team. He led the Bison with four interceptions for 53 yards and recorded 57 tackles on the season, including 21 solo efforts.

Other Bison that racked up honors on the season and were named to the All-PAC Second Team included senior linebacker Todd he women's basketball team finished their season with the best record in school history and their best PAC performance to date. With a record of 16-7 overall and 6-2 in conference play, the cagers advanced as far as sixth place in NCAA Division III Atlantic Region rankings. Their record also earned the team a second place finish in the Presidents' Athletic Conference.

Senior Jennifer Haggerty reached the 1,000 point plateau in the last game of the season, becoming the fifth Bethany women's player to reach the mark. She was also named to the All-PAC first team and led the Bison with an average of 15.3 points per game and 10.1 rebounds per game.

Haggerty was joined on the All-PAC first team by junior forward Chris Colcombe. Colcombe and sophomore Nicole Novak led the team in steals with a 2.8 average per game. Novak was the team's second leading scorer, averaging 12.1 points per game and shooting 40 percent from three-point range. The sophomore guard was named to the All-PAC second team, while sophomore teammate Jen Rodkey earned an honorable mention. (by Laura Hammett)

he men's basketball team finished the season with a disappointing record of 6-17 overall and 1-7 in the Presidents' Athletic Conference. Under the guidance of first-year head coach Ted Eskildsen, the Bison had trouble becoming consistent performers. Injuries and a lack of fan support slowed the Bison's progress and success during the season.

Individual accomplishments outweighed team success as junior center Joe Childress earned first team All-PAC honors. Childress led the conference in field goal percentage with 58.1 percent. In addition, the junior was sixth in the PAC in scoring with 15.6 points per game. Childress was also eighth in the conference in rebounding, pulling down 6.2 boards per game.

Leading the conference in assists was sophomore Jon Blackmon. Blackmon also led the Bison in steals, averaging 1.6 per game. Another contribution Blackmon made to the team was his ability from behind the threepoint line, shooting 41.6 percent.

Freshman guard Kevin Kozup earned a spot on the second team All-PAC by finishing fifth in the conference in scoring, averaging 16.3 points per game. Kozup was also ranked as the sixth best threepoint scorer in NCAA Division III.

One of the most frustrating points of the season was the loss of sophomore Phil Hall to an ankle injury. At the time of his injury, Hall was averaging 16.5 points and 6.3 rebounds per game. His absence under the basket was a crippling blow to the Bison. (by Laura Hammett) ighlighting the men's and women's season were some outstanding individual feats at the PAC Championship meet. Although no Bison swimmer qualified for national competition, they did their best in an increasingly competitive Presidents' Athletic Conference.

High points of the season came for the men's team with a win over Juniata. The women had their moment of glory with a win over York.

Junior Laurelyn Rawson twice bested the school record for the 50-yard freestyle with times of 26.51 and 26.35. The previous record for the event was set in 1990 with a time of 26.63. Rawson achieved personal bests in each of her events in the PAC Championship.

Softball

ison softball once again dominated the Presidents' Athletic Conference. This season the team stampeded their way to a perfect 8-0 conference record and a 20-4 record overall.

Not only did the Bison take home the PAC title, the team led the conference in batting average, pitching, fielding, slugging percentage, scoring and home runs.

Individual Bison standouts swept many post-season awards as well. Senior first base player Nicole Mazur earned the conference's Most Valuable Player award while leading the Bison in slugging percentage and home runs. Mazur also was named to the NCAA Division III Central Region first team, making her eligible for All-American honors.

Joining Mazur on the PAC first team were junior Shelley Cooper, senior LaDonna Tomei, and freshman Wendy Shaffer. Tomei was named the PAC Pitcher of the Year. She had a 1.52 ERA and 25 strikeouts. Shaffer was named the PAC Freshman of the Year. She batted .419 on the season with 31 hits and 25 runs.

he boys of spring completed a record-breaking season with a record of 20-6 overall and 9-3 in the Presidents' Athletic Conference. The Bison finished second in the PAC after a heart-breaking loss to Waynesburg in the conference championship.

Six members of the squad received first team All-PAC honors. Junior catcher Jimmy Taylor was named the most valuable player of the conference. Taylor is only the second Bison to ever receive the award and led the conference in batting with a .470 average.

Joining Taylor on the first team were sophomore pitcher Ken Richey, junior first baseman T.J. Billiard, junior second baseman Bob Deuley, senior shortstop Dan Takah and sophomore outfielder Jeff Weekley.

Named to the all-conference second team was junior outfielder Chris Olexia. Honorable mention was given to junior pitcher Matt Rohm, junior third baseman Bill Matteson, junior utility player Larry Santowasso and freshman outfielder Matt Matteson.

The Bison were first in the conference in batting with an average of .357 as a team. In pitching, Bethany led the league with a 3.07 team ERA. In scoring the Bison were on top with an average of 7.10 runs per game.

Individuals led the conference in categories as well. Rohm led the conference with an .075 ERA. Richey led the conference with the most wins with a record of 7-1. Weekley led the conference in stolen bases averaging .86 per game and runs scored averaging 1.14 per game. (by Laura Hammett) he men's and women's track teams finished another season meeting team goals and personal expectations. The men finished second in the Presidents' Athletic Conference championships, and the women finished fifth in the conference's women's invitational.

Junior Brian Dickman was named the most valuable performer at the championship meet, placing first in the long jump, the 400 intermediate hurdles and the 100 meter run. His conference meet performance made him eligible for the 400 intermediate hurdle race at the NCAA Division III national championships in Chicago. He placed 12th with a time of 54.6.

Also placing first at the conference meet were sophomore Shedrick

Young, triple jump; sophomore Bryon Beresford, discus; and the 4x100 team consisting of Dickman, junior Richie Beckett, and freshmen Dan Spickard and Terry Jackson.

The women's team showed increasing improvement throughout the season. Though there were only a handful of women on the team, the athletes worked to meet their own personal goals.

Junior Chris Colcombe broke a school record in the 5,000 meters with a time of 21:43.45. Colcombe broke the previous record by nearly two seconds.

Also placing for the Bison were junior Laurelyn Rawson, who placed fourth in the javelin, and Sara Doty, who was fifth in the 1,500 meters.

Memories from the year will make us laugh and cry as we remember the good and the frustrating, all becoming a part of our dreams.
